

FAMILY EMERGENCY INFO SHEET

In the digital age, we rarely memorize things like phone numbers and addresses. After all, that information is available anytime, anywhere. Phone numbers for friends and family are stored in our phone, and we can always look up an address with a quick internet search.

When a hurricane strikes, though, things change. The loss of both cell phone and internet service is a common occurrence. On top of this, lack of power could mean that a dead cell phone can't be recharged. In this situation, retrieving important personal information for family members could prove to be impossible.

For this reason, it's a good idea to create an emergency info sheet for your family in advance and store it along with the other items in your hurricane preparedness emergency info kit. In the event of a natural disaster, having this information readily available will make it easier to contact family members.
